ABSTRACT

The challenges we have all had to face due to the pandemic situation in the world have forced us all to re-think the way we teach and structure our teaching. Is it possible to offer students a similar experience online as in a physical classroom? Designing a project or course with the Community of Inquiry (CoI) framework in mind can help professors some steps on the way towards creating and keeping social, cognitive and teaching presence in an online world.

During the session experiences will be shared regarding two different projects taking place in April 2020.

1. The first had to undergo a complete shift from an intensive week on location in Denmark with 29 students and 7 teachers from 7 different countries - to an intensive week online.
2. The other, an online 24h Hackathon with 17 students from 4 different countries.
